WASHINGTON, August 21.

SALARY AND ARREARS QUESTION.

Letter of the suppressed correspondence between General Grant and the President, relative to the salary and arrears of Sheridan, has transpired. Grant, regarding it to a New Yorker sent from here, to a very high official, that he was opposed to the suspension of the Secretary, but that he was not extremely solicitous about it. Grant gave this Presidential opinion that the latter had no legal right to suspend Stanton, although he says might be a wise exercise of executive discretion. Defendants replied that they had acted in the matter only as forwarders; that the explosive material came to them not as Secretary Stanton, simply handed it forward to Boreman, Neal & Son, as plaintiffs' lines; that they were themselves deceived by the descriptive title of glycain oil, in the manifest, and had no knowledge or suspicion of the dangerous character of the freight which thus passed through their hands in the ordinary course of their business. The judgment rendered is understood to be finally settle the fact that plaintiffs are entitled to damages, and cannot recover their losses thereby, but the question whether the defendants are ultimately liable, or whether the plaintiffs look for the original shipper of the kerosene, goes to a higher tribunal for argument and decision.

KILBOURN CITY.

Its Location and Situation—The Lumber Trade—The "Dells" of the Wisconsin River—The Hop Trade and Its Extent.

(Special Correspondence of the Chicago Tribune.)

KILBOURN CITY, WIS., August 31.

Should the readers of the TRIBUNE be interested at all in a correspondence from this place, probably some of them would like to learn its location, its surroundings, and some of its characteristics.

Kilbourn City, like some other Western cities, is a village, situated on the Wisconsin River, about 150 miles from its mouth, 800 miles by railroad northwest of Chicago, on the Wisconsin Dells, where the Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad crosses the river. Not so far from midway between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi River. The village has twelve or fifteen hundred inhabitants, and is increasing quite rapidly. Not long since it obtained considerable notoriety in getting a charter for its dam, and in being dammed by the lumbermen; their object in getting a dam built, of course, being to raise the water mark at the head of these Little Dells; and in rushing through among those six-way logs, which, at the time, were not arriving in sightly. And yet, in low water, a skiff may be navigated through this current of water, and the water itself, little effort. This is the favorite picnic resort of the people in this place, and a favorite resort for those who ride down from Milwaukee and other places on excursions.

One other notoriety it hopes; and well they may be noted, for our railroad depot is the identical depot in which Abraham Lincoln, United States for the original shipment of money, and the identical money that the ...dollars were paid at our depot for hops raised in this immediate vicinity. This year ...ops are now maturing well and picking will probably be commenced about the first of September. The crop will be large, and pickers to the acre (generally they are ...ed by the hundred) will be in demand, ...at a large part of the hops will have to ...from other counties. There will probably ...ve one hundred, however, getting from ...to the pound for picking is usually ...ed by the pound for the pickers, and ...ey will pick from two to four bushels a day. Then, too, the young ladies generally like to ...t their Yales pretty dime. It is not ...ge that the hop fever rages badly ...ong the pickers, but it is said to be ...healthier region in the State or in the ...

In order to keep this article within reasonable limits, I will only add that when we ...ll our attention to other matters we hope to have the smartest town in the State.
